REMEMBERING THE EVENTS OF 9/11

Each year we come to this time when looking back provides a reminder of how far we've come since those events on 9/11/01, and yet a sobering wake-up call about how far we have yet to go in achieving peace on this Earth, a planet that we all call home.

Whilst most of us will never know the full extent of the reasons behind what happened in the USA on that fateful day, we know that many innocent people and their loved ones suffered on the day, in weeks and months following, and many still suffer enormously to this day some 18 years later.

I therefore extend both my sincere and loving thoughts for healing and all manner of positive vibes (like virtual hugs!) to all those still impacted. You are not alone.

At times like this humanity needs to remember that's what we are, a humanity, and that we must all look out for each other by making good decisions every day, keeping each other safe and cared for (even from a distance), bringing joy not heartache, and allowing those who are hurting to heal in their own time and at their own pace.

I am your friend in peace, and remain committed to staying the course. Through Serenidad's broader efforts – empowering people to make positive change and facilitating peace – I also guarantee my enduring (lifelong) support for making good change. The light in the distance is my strongest motivation.
