REMEMBERING THE EVENTS OF 9/11

I have been reflecting on what to say again this year, nearly 20 years on from that fateful day in the USA.

When I speak about personal choices in our training seminars and programs and via our videos, I often ask people to reflect on their personal choices and impress how it is important to be discerning, factual and patient in order to make the right choices in life. Ultimately, when we make good choices and use our personal and positional power in the right, constructive way events like 9/11 just can't happen.

This year I have reflected again on my decision, in 1981, not to move to uptown Manhattan where I was due to live and work at that time. These last few years particularly, and around this 9/11 anniversary date, I have pondered whether a choice to stay in NYC might have resulted in me working inside or near one of the World Trade Centers.

We sometimes never know what may have happened 'only if', however to at least reflect on past choices gives us the chance to value what we have now and perhaps teach us lessons that we can apply in the future.

From my The Peace Ranch® Peace Bite (#39) taped this morning: "Nobody in the world should be subjected to that kind of destructive, negative use of personal and positional power. Every human being on Earth deserves the right to live in peace and harmony, with courtesy (human to human), with empathy, with compassion, with forgiveness." "We really need to look hard at how, as a humanity, we are treating one another."

I am your friend in peace, and remain committed to staying the course. Through Serenidad's broader efforts – empowering people to make positive change and facilitating peace – I also guarantee my enduring (lifelong) support for making good change.

Sending you virtual hugs from Australia. You are not alone.
